

Bio - Jeans Morrow

Jean Morrow is the Critical Care/Neurosurgical Educator for London Health Sciences Center and surrounding LHIN. She has enjoyed a lengthy career in Critical Care working in the Medical Surgical Intensive Care and Cardiac Surgical Recovery Units at LHSC for the past 23 years.

Before accepting this newly developed educational role at LHSC, Jean was one of the original Critical Care Outreach Team members, where she had the privilege of bringing her knowledge of critical care outside the walls of the ICU to the benefit of patients and staff across the organization.

Like many of you here today, Jean is a dedicated life long learner. Granted her diploma in nursing from Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in 1988, she later returned to school graduating from Western University in 2010 as the Gold Medalist in the Post RN BScN program. Currently she is in the final stages of completing her Masters of Science in Nursing from Western. Her research is on the delivery of continued professional development education to acute care nurses. Looking at how nurses wish to receive education while at work.

When not busy with these endeavours, Jean thoroughly enjoys gourmet cooking, events in the arts community, running and most importantly... indulging in family time with her husband and four growing children at their cottage north of Huntsville.
